

THE MORNING POST.

SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1834.

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS.
No. 114.

Washington, April 12th, 1834.—Yesterday I saw nothing about politics; for I did not wish to amalgamate them with another subject, with which they cannot have the impudence to claim any alliance—the social enjoyments of life. I have said nothing about the failure of Banks, though hair-on-end rumors about them were very rife. I have always considered it better to tell the truth one day in the rear, than report a lie one day in advance.—What is news if it be not true?

At 3 o'clock to-day there was a report made in the Capitol, as the House adjourned, that another Bank in Washington had failed. When I came home to dine, I was informed by a director of the Bank, that it had not failed ten minutes before, when he left it. Fudge! I would not tell a thing unless I saw it; nor foretell an event, unless I foresaw it with a telescope.

The Bank of this city, that did fail, I am informed from good authority, had but $30,000 of bills in circulation; and the Bank of the Metropolis offered to loan the directors $40,000, on their own security, to sustain it.—But they had all, but one, who resided in the country, sold out every share, except a very few—and one of them had but one share—and they of course did not accept the relief.—Judge what stuff Banks are made of! Not a few of them are mere whitened sepulchres;—Old Orleans, like the witch of Endor, has merely disturbed their ghosts. They will soon be laid.

The Bank here that did fail, I understand, had a considerable amount of private "deposits," which they could not think of suffering to be "removed" in these "distressing" times; and, wishing to do equal justice to all, refused to do justice to any one.

I believe the measures of the President against the Bank, will rend the veil of more inequity in the banking system than was "ever dreamt of in our philosophy."

I believe, after the prejudices and passions of this generation shall have passed away, General Jackson will be considered one of the wisest—nay the wisest—the shrewdest, the ablest of all the American Presidents. He came into power when it was more difficult to reform, than to establish a government; and, if his administration had not been founded upon a rock, the floods and the tempests of the opposition, would long since have swept it away.

To keep a record of some prominent events, I must turn to the proceedings of the Senate, and note a resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Clay, requiring the Secretary of that body to ascertain the aggregate number of names affixed to the "distress," and "anti-distress" memorials.

Mr. Wright bothered the Hon. distresser, by suggesting the propriety of proceeding under standingly in the business; as it was ascertained, there were a good many pseudonymous signatures; and not a few real ones, affixed twice, and perhaps three times, to different memorials; and that moreover, on the Albany distress memorial, there were only about 1300, while it was stated, when it was presented, there were 2500!

Upon this Mr. Clay suggested, with his usual candor and habitual regard to truth, that a portion of the signatures, the missing, had probably been detached from the distress memorial, and appended to the counter memorial.

Mr. Wright appealed to the Secretary of the Senate, demanding whether he (Mr. W.) had seen this diminished memorial since it had been presented. Mr. Clay, with his usual effrontery, confessed he did not mean as he said.

After a good deal of his canting and whining about this business, Mr. Clay's ghost of a Resolution was laid on the table, much against his will.

The Senate then adjourned to Monday.

The House debated the Appropriation Bill: and will probably continue the debate for some time. It furnishes an excellent opportunity to the opposition to show their extravagant ideas of economy. It is amusing to hear these scoundrels talk about economy, and the people! when it is well known the people merely send them here, that they might feed at the public crib, instead of plundering their constituents.

The New York Election has produced some anxiety here, and more rumors; but any news I could tell you on the subject, would only be reminiscences. One thing, however, I will tell you, news or not; the fine mornings of Washington are the finest I ever enjoyed any where in my life; but their infernal ones, the most infernal, I ever suffered. Every thing here is an extremes—but it would be invidious to particularize.

The fine weather is so much like a dream here, that, upon my soul! I hardly dare to stir, lest I should disturb it. I should be much more disposed to write by lightning in a thunder storm, than such a morning as I have voluptuously enjoyed to-day. So I shall say no more; except, and mark it,—that I have not forgotten the divinities of Madame Serurier's Soiree; I shall notice them the first cloudy day, merely by way of antithesis.

REIS EFFENDI.

The following is extracted from a letter received from our Washington Correspondent, dated the 15th. We shall publish the remainder of the letter on Monday:—

There has been a hard run, I am told, to-day on the Bank of the Metropolis. Several Banks have stopped paying specie in the vicinity, and elsewhere; and this has increased the panic. The Patriotic Bank that failed yesterday, borrowed, I understand, $60,000 specie, on Friday, of the Metropolis Bank, to sustain its credit; and on Saturday last gave the most solemn assurances that the Bank would not fail. I understand this Bank yesterday had but $60,000 specie on hand. Is it the same they borrowed of the Metropolis Bank? And did they do it with the view of draining the Metropolis, and then failing themselves, to induce the public to make a run upon this Bank? If they did, it was a Right Honorable piece of honesty! and it they did not, they can very easily account for borrowing the $60,000, and assuring the public they should not fail, and failing the next day. It looks a little queerish at any rate; a little suspicious at all events; nay it looks conscientious! as Mr. Clay "understands" the term; and as Fontleroy and Arnold understood it.

The Clerk of the House of Representatives made the Government Deposites in the Patriotic Bank; but I have not learnt what amount remained undrawn. So much for trusting to the panic faith of the opposition. I think if the opposition members should lose their pay—but there is never any danger of this,—they would make "the galled jades wince"; it would not think their "withers were unking"; as Mr. Clay says.

The editor of the Salem Gazette invites Mr. Mossie to visit that town.

This day completes fifty-nine years since the battle of Lexington.

POLICE COURT.

(Friday.)

Riding by moonlight.—On Thursday evening, about 7 o'clock, it occurred to Patrick McDonald that it would be a mighty fine thing to treat himself to a ride, provided he could borrow the back of a baker's horse, whose fine proportions he was then admiring, as his keeper removed the bread-cart harness. Accordingly, about 10, he repaired to the stable where the horse boarded, and, after breaking the padlock, found himself in Dobbin's drawing-room. The noise he made in entering, however, startled a sleeping duck, who raised an alarming "quack, quack," which Patrick could only silence by taking a couple of "half-hitches" round her taper little neck; and no duck, nor deary, was ever known to make much noise after being subjected to that process, though considerable fuss has sometimes been made about it afterwards, by Coroner's juries. Having put down all opposition, McDonald saddled and straddled the baker's nag, and took an equestrian excursion through the neighboring villages, but in returning through Gooch street, about 12 o'clock, he had the misfortune to meet a watchman, who was better acquainted with the horse, than the rider, and forthwith set to work surmising that there was some smuggling going on. He accordingly followed McDonald to the stable, and thence to his home, where he questioned him concerning his right of property in the horse. Mac boldly answered that it was his own. But Charley was not quite sure yet, and put the following query to him; "What kind of ears had he on?" Mac, finding he could not recollect, pulled foot, but was soon overtaken, and saluted his captor, with—"Be J—s, ye've bate me, and I'll give up. I thought I might get meself aff by tilling a good story; and you would do the same, if you were in my stockings." The court decided, that the affair only amounted to a trespass, the remedy for which was by a civil action, and accordingly ordered the night-rider to be discharged, which Patrick considered very civil sort of treatment.

Mary Jane Millard. A pretty little girl, about 8 years of age, identified, in jail, yesterday, Frederick H. Wier, as the individual, who, a few days ago, met her in the street, and offered her ninepence to show him where Frog Pond was. She accordingly accompanied him on to the common, where he attempted an infamous assault upon her, from which her screams only compelled him to desist. As Wier is now in jail for a similar offence, the case will be sent directly to the Grand Jury, unless there should be an attempt made to bail him, in which case he will be examined in the Police Court, upon this second complaint.

We shall be obliged to "hop the twig," if our neighbors are determined to cudgel us so severely for expressing some doubts as to the utility of placing an additional number of trees upon the Common. We do not like all forest, nor all plain—but a sprinkling of both. The margin of the Common is already nearly surrounded with large and elegant trees, besides a number in the vicinity of "Quincy Lake"—this, some citizens, who like to see their way clear in the world, thought enough of trees, but others think differently—those who cross the Common, gentlemen living in Beacon street and its vicinity, want them for a shade while on their way home, and to look at after they get home. This is an important reason for placing them there, to be sure, and should be perfectly satisfactory to those who live in other portions of the city; yet there are men so querulous as to say that the Common was intended for convenience, as well as ornament, and that while planting new trees may, in the estimation of some, improve its beauty, it will diminish its usefulness.

A portion of the passengers who went to Newton in the railroad cars on Thursday, were obliged to seek for some other conveyance home, in consequence of the engines ceasing to operate with sufficient power to draw the car. Upon examination, it was discovered that a board nail much bent, had lodged immediately under the safety valve, in such a manner that the escape of steam could not be prevented. The engine had performed satisfactorily during the morning of the same day, with a load of 35 tons attached. A large portion of those disappointed on Thursday, took a trip yesterday, free of expense, and such as wished it, received their money back.

The New York Bank editors have asserted that the U. S. Frigate Brandywine, and the Austrian Frigates, fired salutes to the wig procession on Tuesday—the truth is, the Austrian Frigate saluted the Brandywine, and the latter returned the compliment. The editor of the N. Y. Standard says he has the authority of all the officers of the U. S. ship Brandywine, for saying, that the salute was in answer to the salute fired on board the Austrian frigate, and not out of compliment to the meeting at Castle Garden.

Mr. Robinson brought up his Bank resolutions again in the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, on Monday last, in the form of an amendment to a resolution authorising the canal commissioners to construct a bridge over the Pennsylvania canal in the borough of Marietta. After Mr. R. had been delivered of a speech, the resolution and amendment were indefinitely postponed, by a vote of 45 to 28.

In consequence of the death of Mr. Dennis, of Maryland, both Houses adjourned on Tuesday, after passing the usual resolutions upon such occasions, for attending his funeral, &c.

The rope walk of Messrs Dugan & Getting of Baltimore, was entirely consumed by fire on Monday night last. A part of the property was insured.

Mr. Audubon, the naturalist, sailed from N. York, for Liverpool, in the packet ship North America, on Wednesday last.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Mr. Greene—I attended Mr. Luther's first Lecture on Banking, last Tuesday evening, at the Old Common Council Room, with a high degree of satisfaction. The following positions were ably supported:—

1st, Banking Capital in the aggregate is entirely without foundation, and exists only on paper.

2d, It is an utter fallacy to suppose that Bank bills of circulation are based on specie, or that they are convertible into specie at the pleasure of the holder.

3d, All interest on Bank paper falls ultimately on the laboring or producing class of the country.

His argument on these points were convincing and conclusive, and those who attended expressed their decided approbation.

The second Lecture will be delivered next Tuesday evening, and will be based on the following proposition, viz. Banks have the power to raise or depress the price of real estate, food, raiment, wages and all the necessities of life at their pleasure, "consequently they can take bread from the poor man's family and reduce him to poverty at any time they see fit."

I think any person who wishes to know by what means he is kept poor, although he labors incessantly, will find himself well paid, by purchasing a ticket at the door and hearing for himself.

AN ENEMY TO MONOPOLIES.

Resurrection Men.—Last Monday there was much excitement at the villages of Great Falls and Dover, N. H., and their vicinity, as we learn by a gentleman from that neighborhood, in consequence of the disinterment of the body of a Mr. Brown, who died suddenly, and was buried, a few days since, in Somersworth, N. H. By some accidental discovery it was found out, last Sabbath, that Brown had been dug up, and diligent search was made through the whole country round about to find the body. Suspicion fell on one Marshall, a trader at Great Falls. His premises were searched on Monday morning, and during the search, Marshall was observed, while some persons were examining the cellar, to fix himself in a posture to guard with uncommon vigilance a hoghead standing in a corner of the apartment. This hoghead was at length opened, and the corpse was found snugly packed into the bottom of it, covered with salt. Marshall was put under arrest, and carried before a magistrate for examination. Owing to some informality in the complaint, he was permitted to go at large—but, as our informant states, he was again brought up for trial on Tuesday morning, and there was but little doubt but the evidence would be sufficient to warrant the magistrate in ordering him to recognize to appear at a higher tribunal.—Lowell Mercury.

Drowned.—The body of Mr. Joshua Nason was taken from the water this morning by the side of Commercial wharf, where it is supposed he had fallen in sometime in the night while attempting to go on board a vessel. He had been on board one vessel late in the evening inquiring for a passage to Kennebec. He was about thirty years of age, a shoemaker by trade, a widower, and has left one child.—We understand his parents reside in Newburyport, or in that vicinity. He has resided several years in this city.—Portland Cour.

Mr. Leslie.—This distinguished artist sailed this morning for England, circumstances connected with the prosperity of his labors, and the support of his family, compelling him reluctantly to leave this country. Last evening, at the invitation of the Academy of Design, a large number of artists and literary gentlemen of this city, met him at the rooms in Clinton Hall, and partook of a parting collation prepared for the occasion.—N. Y. Star.

By a gentleman who left New York on Wednesday, we learn that the news of the death of Horatio Gates, Esq. had been received in that city.—Daily News.

The body of a man was picked up this morning, near Arch street wharf; on examination it proved to be that of John Bell, a ship-keeper, who has been missing since December last.—Ibid.

An old and infirm man, a revolutionary soldier, named Vincent Owens, was murdered under aggravating circumstances, near Browns-ville, Pa. on the 20th inst., by a man named Nathan Chaney. The murderer immediately made his escape.

A Persecuting Dun.—"I have a story to tell you of Lord Bath. He owed a tradesman eight hundred pounds, and would never pay him; the man determined to persecute him till he did, and one morning followed him to Lord Winchelsea's, and sent up word that he wanted to speak with him. Lord Bath came down and said, 'Fellow what do you want with me?' 'My money,' said the man, as loud as ever he could bawl, before all the servants.—He bade him call next morning—and then, would not see him. The next Sunday the man followed him to church, and got into the next pew; he leaned over and said, 'my money, give me my money.' My Lord went to the end of the pew; the man too—'Give me my money.' The sermon was on avarice, and the text, 'cursed are they that heap up riches.' The man groaned out 'O Lord!' and pointed to my Lord Bath. In short he persisted so much, and drew the eyes of all the congregation, that my Lord Bath went out and paid him directly. I assure you this is a fact."—Walpole's Correspondence.

Barbers have long been celebrated for their wit and the exquisite keenness of their jokes. But the oddest of all mortals of the barber-ous tribe of which we have the least idea appears in the last Albion papers, with an advertisement, dated at the "Head Quarters of the Republican Hall of Fashion." After going on for some time with 'dry cuts' he winds up with the following postscript:—"The subscriber has invented an entire new apparatus for shaving. It goes by steam. The knife is about the size of a broad axe, with tongs to steady the patient. The whole concern is to be heated red hot, and it removes the beard quicker than thunder and lightning, and without pain. It cuts hair in the completest manner, and saves the expense and trouble of a second operation by taking off the head at the same time."—Marietta Ad.

A gentleman having purchased an alarm clock, an acquaintance asked him what he intended to do with it. "O" answered he, "sure I've nothing to do but to pull the spring and wake myself."

A Negro was brought to England, and the first point shown to him being the chalky cliffs of Dover, "O ki!" he said, "me know what make the buccaras all so white."

The U. S. ship St. Louis, arrived at Laguna on the 12th March, and sailed again on the 17th. The officers and crew were in good health.

Specie.—The whole amount entered at New York within thirty days past, exceeds two millions of dollars.

Two African princes have arrived at New York from Liberia.

RHODE-ISLAND ERECT!

The Democratic candidate for Governor, Mr. FRANCIS, has been re-elected in this State. A majority of the Senate, and probably of the House, are friends of the present Administration.

It is rumored that the Bank of Virginia and its branches have stopped specie payment. The Journal of Commerce in commenting upon the above report, says—

We publish this to show the state of panic which exists at Washington, and because the report having come from Washington in other letters, it is circulating every where, and the only way to put it down is to publish it with the proper contradictions. The Bank of Virginia has a capital of $2,000,000, of which $1,000,000 belongs to the State. It has on hand about half a million of specie, and we see by the Richmond papers received this morning, had just received another hundred thousand by a packet from New Orleans.—This Bank and the Farmers' Bank of Virginia, with a capital of $2,000,000, constitutes the chief banking institutions of the State.—They have branches in various places, and a circulation which is immense, amounting to from three to five millions of dollars. Their credit is undoubted, and we find that the report which has come from Washington does not in the least impair the confidence of our merchants. The Bank of Virginia has immense amounts of funds in this city, for which it can draw at any moment. One of our banks received yesterday mercantile paper for collection to the amount of $50,000.—As a complete quietus of the report which prevailed at Washington, we have to state, that letters from the Cashier of the Bank were received here by the Southern mail of this morning, upon various ordinary business affairs. The brokers here continue to buy the bills at the same rates as before, viz. 2 a 2 1-2 per cent. discount.

Destructive Fire.—We regret to state this morning, (April 15,) that a most disastrous fire broke out in this city last evening, at about half past 8 o'clock, which destroyed property to an immense amount. It originated in a stable connected by a shed to the Penobscot Exchange, which was on fire in a few moments after the alarm was first given, and progressed rapidly in other directions.—Before the engines could be brought into action, the fire had made astonishing progress, and soon the whole square presented nothing but one broad sheet of flames, which could not be subdued until the whole square with the exception of the Exchange, was a prostrated ruin. Three dwelling houses, two stores, three stables, a saddler's, blacksmith's, and one or two joiners' shops were burnt, with more or less of their contents. The Exchange was on fire nearly two hours, and it was but by strenuous exertions that the building was saved, very greatly injured. Eight horses or more are supposed to have been burnt in the stables, and those valuable ones. We understand there was an insurance on the Exchange of $5000—the furniture, bedding, &c. in it, was mostly removed, but must be seriously damaged. We cannot now estimate the total loss of property, nor do we at present know what amount was insured. Some are severe sufferers and little able to bear their loss—all will feel it. We have neither time nor space for further particulars this morning.—Bangor Rep.

Oratorio.—The Handel and Haydn will give a Sacred Oratorio to-morrow evening.—The pieces announced for the occasion are very various and attracting, and cannot fail to afford an agreeable and appropriate Sabbath evening's entertainment.

We have received, but too late for insertion, a bill of the performance, for a Concert of Sacred Music, to be given by Mrs. Strong, of the Choir of Trinity Church, Summer street, on Sunday evening, the 27th inst
